As we enter a new year, I am amazed at our team's adaptability, resilience, and dedication as they navigated challenging transitions while caring for our clients faceto-face, virtually, and hybrid. We remained steadfast in encouraging healing for our women, children, and families. Recovery has always been our priority, even in the most difficult of times.

We welcomed 933 women into our substance-use residential and outpatient treatment programs. We safely housed 69 women and their children to break the cycle of substance use disorders and homelessness. Over the past 5 years, 92% of babies have been born substance-free. We consider it a privilege to care for each client as they walk their own recovery journey or are otherwise impacted by substance use disorders.

🛛 Continuum

of Care

"With a spirit of humility, we consider it a privilege to care for thousands of women, children, and families each year who are in various stages of their own recovery journey."

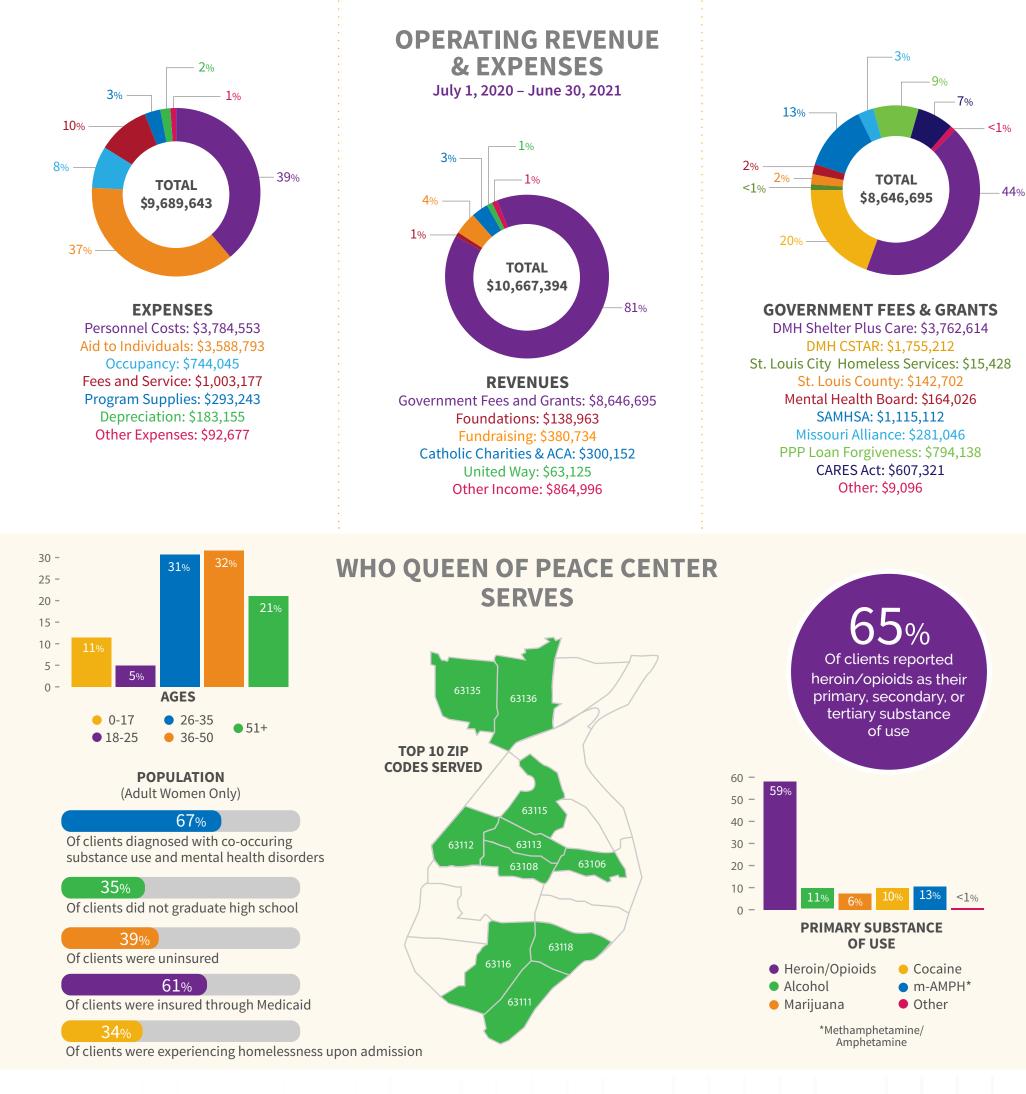

The impact of social distancing and isolation became ever more apparent in the past year. We ensured there was critical access to our services for those in recovery and their children. Families rely on us - and we are here for them our doors and hearts remain open. Every time our women have the courage to knock, we answer.

I am pleased to look back on our achievements, including the transition of Our Lady of Perpetual Help (OLPH) Recovery Home to the first recovery home in St. Louis for women with children who are experiencing chronic homelessness and substance use disorders. OLPH Recovery Home provides a safe, sober living environment for up to 22 women and children. In our first year, we were able to house 45 people in our home so that their lifelong recovery journeys would continue with their families.

Looking ahead, we are focused on reaching more women and children. We are excited about our opportunities for growth this year utilizing new technology that will help support our clinicians, and implementing new programming for our clients to ensure we are providing the highest quality clinical care for those seeking treatment.

We remain committed to breaking down barriers for those we serve through our passion for service. We believe a life of peace is possible for everyone.
